Moods in Photograph

Partly buried in letters, papers, articles, Mrs. Bamford races from meeting to class to meeting. She is quick to praise or criticize with equal success. Conscious always of word count, page cost, or ad space, she helps and guides our literary efforts.

Enthusiasm is her hallmark. It shines through all her work and play. It softens criticism, improves praise and infects us all.

For this, and much more, we dedicate our book to her.

In this Lamp the photograph, with crystal clearness, catches each highlight, each reflection, and each silhouette pulsing intimately through the rhythm of the Lasell girl's life.

*Tempo
of Daily Life*

Pace of Early Morning

Sunlight slants
Footsteps come
A new day—
Our tempos follow
its varied pace
Our moods blend at every turn

Unconformity—
 With cheerful smile
 bringing the world in an envelope.
 Understanding—
 With quick mind
 bringing question to complacency.
 The morning is on the upward curve

The worn path is traveled by a thousand feet—
They rush to spin a knob
They rush to strike a match
They rush

DRAPER

Pages become blurs
 in early morning hours Executive minds plan
 far into the night
 We all unite together
 in a common fear
 We live as one

BLAISDELL

Blaisdell beams
 As crimson draperies dazzle in room three
 And flashlights glow.
 Yet panic
 As sleep is lost to
 creaking planks
 And sucret boxes shut

Party

With spinning wheels
 and lilting melody
 We greet the lights
 We climb our Ivory Tower and sit expectant—
 A simple song
 and many feet
 Make hearts and minds soar and sing
 With stinging hands
 and enraptured spirit
 We leave the lights

The climax of rehearsal
 The certainty of deadline
 Is a way of life—
 But there's quiet here

Swing of Daily Life

Arms and bodies sway
in moving cadence
House joins house
in closer union
As hands plod carefully, quietly on

An elusive drop of red Meditation and reason
The accenting shadow
Unknowns and solids
All these flow
through our days

A time of recompense
for all
A time of charity
for all—
Broadening horizons
Gaining poise
We round out our lives

In cap and gown they sit
And rule, and judge and guide Helping, joining all
